

MERCURY ANALYSER FOR TALBOT LABORATORIES

Talbot Laboratories has invested in a state-of-the-art direct mercury analyzer, understood to be first instrument of its kind in KwaZulu-Natal. The instrument allows for the simple and accurate testing of mercury in solid samples. Laboratory manager Belinda Talbot said the Tri-Cell DMA-80 offers accuracy, speed and simplicity. "The DMA effortlessly analyzes liquid and solid samples without sample digestion and wet chemistry pretreatment steps, and without any waste disposal," she said. Talbot said the instrument has a phenomenal 0.0015ng Hg detection limit and that it boasts a range of technical advantages, including the fact that samples are tested in less than 5 minutes, 40 samples can be automatically processed in less than four hours, from start to finish, and that results are produced over a wide dynamic range.

The instrument is used in several applications - environmental (water, soils, and sludges), waste characterization (hazardous waste), biological tissue analysis (fish, feathers and eggs), materials testing (petrochemical analysis including naphtha and oil), clinical analysis (blood, hair and urine) and mining (ore and fly ash).
